What is Sunday without the St. Louis Globe-Democrat The Reliable Paper

With Its Fascinating Magazine Section—Its Great Comic Section—Its Incomparable Society Section—Its Sport News Written by Experts—And Its Complete and Always Reliable News from Everywhere

Here Is Part of the Feast of Features in Next Sunday's Globe-Democrat:

The Little Brown Book—A complete short fiction story of an easy-going, conservative fellow in love with a girl who finally marries another because he is too bashful to propose and what happens when her first lover is accused of a $5000 bank robbery.

The Anonymous Roosevelt and "Men"—An interesting account of the Colonel as the author of a dozen unsigned articles. So closely was the secret of the authorship guarded that the articles, all of an editorial nature, brought forth many guesses, the majority of opinion finally settling upon Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard.

Jenny Lind—A graphic review of the famous actress' life, her appearance at the Old Castle Garden and a business venture under the leadership of P. T. Barnum.

Milton's Wife—A complete short fiction story by Sewall Ford, dealing with Milton who looked like he could be trusted, for his appearance at once gave the impression that he could, if necessary, lay down the law anywhere and to anyone and get away with it—except.

Will New Yorkers be Able to Suppress Noises?—An article dealing with the efforts of Gothamites to make the metropolis as quiet as a country village.

Fashions—An illustrated and descriptive account of the new frocks, which are shorter.

The Typ and the Hop—A complete short fiction story by Hugh Hendexter. This is a story of tense dramatic interest wherein the vandeville hypnotist finds himself in the center of a storm of two-fold violence which could destroy utterly or send him back into the big time. Faker, kidnaper, bank robber, murderer—which or all was the "typ"?

The Restless Sex—Another installment of Robert W. Chambers' latest novel.

Photoplay Writing as a Profession—An outlined by John Emerson and Anita Loos, depicting just what is necessary to succeed in this department of screen work.

The Comic Section—Will include Polly and Her Pals, Just Boy, The Katzenjammer Kids and Barney Google.

FROM COX PRESIDENTIAL

TRAIN ENROUTE.

To the Editor The Farmington Times, Farmington, Mo.

Having covered every State of the West on his campaign tour Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, Democratic Candidate for the Presidency, is now traversing the States of Oklahoma and Missouri. His visits here will mark the completion of his Western itinerary and after a few days rest he will renew his campaign in the East. Governor Cox has traveled over ten thousand miles and on finishing his tour in this section of the country will have visited 22 states, speaking in the principal cities and towns and from the rear platform of his train. During this pilgrimage he has made over two hundred speeches. Everywhere he has been greeted by record breaking crowds. Towns have closed their business houses and schools have been dismissed so that all could be at the railroad stations to hear his message. Never before has a candidate for the highest office within the gift of the people been greeted by such an out-pouring of men and women. Never before has a speaker been given such close attention or been so cordially received.

In the course of his speeches in this territory, Governor Cox said:

"I want to express my appreciation to the men and women who have come here to extend a greeting. I recognize that in a larger sense it is not personal but that it is an indication of your interest in the institutions of Government. I have made a long pilgrimage—almost ten thousand miles—in order that I may meet the people of the great Western country, ascertain your needs, your problems and your ideas of Government. I have not asked you to come to Ohio to find out where I stand. I have come here to give you the opportunity of finding out at first hand what my position is on the issues of this campaign, because I recognize that we live under democratic institutions, and that a candidate for the Presidency is seeking preference from you. You have the sovereign power, and it would seem to me to be an encroachment upon the spirit of democratic institutions if I asked you to come to Ohio on my front porch for the purpose of finding out where I stand on public questions.

"I am very glad to see both men and women here. The mothers of America are tremendously interested in the discussion of what we call the establishment of the new order in the world, which we believe will bring an end to war and which will keep the sons of this and succeeding generations out of the trenches of war. That is the one great issue in this campaign. We are not going to have a settled condition in the world until the nations of the earth agree to stop wasting their resources in the building and maintenance of large armaments. If there is a country banker here, I would like him to tell his neighbors in the discussion of these questions what the result will be in Europe, in the world, in America, if the nations of Europe cannot pay their debt. If they cannot pay their debt, they will not have credit, and they cannot have credit unless they stop maintaining large armaments, and if they do not have credit, they cannot buy the surplus products of America. That is one reason why cattle are not bringing the prices they did a year ago, why hogs have come down in price, why the prices of wheat and corn and all the surplus commodities of America have declined—for the simple reason that the agencies of international exchange have been upset and disorganized.

"The nations of Europe cannot be given credit any more than an individual can be given credit unless it is known that they can pay their debts, and they cannot pay their debts unless they stop the great expense of maintaining the necessities of war. A battleship costs four million dollars in this modern day. You can reclaim two million acres of land in any Western state for the cost of a battleship.

I am in therefore of taking our resources and using them for the purpose of creating the agencies of feeding people rather than for the maintenance of agencies for the slaughter and destruction of humanity.

"In the truer sense, we are making this fight as much for the next generation as we are for this generation. We have just been in war, in which ten million people lost their lives. Not many years ago they were mere children, and if the new order which we are attempting to establish in the world had been adopted, twenty-five or thirty-five years ago, the ten million soldiers who are in their graves now would not be there. I mention this in order that you may understand what it is in the main I am contending for in this campaign.

"The old order in the world brought war overnight. We are contending for the new order in the world. We are contending for an international arrangement—the League of Nations—under which controversies between nations will be submitted to discussion and to arbitration rather than to war. We find in every State a quickened and increasing interest in the cause. I do not myself see how men and women can find indifference of opinion upon that subject. Certainly peace is more desirable than war. The only way to gain peace in the world is for the nations of the earth to agree to stop maintaining large standing armies and to stop building battleships. If you disarm the world, the world cannot continue war.

"Now what is the objection to the League and treaty? In the main it is this: that we will be drawn into every difference and controversy in Europe, and that our soldier boys will be sent overseas with each difficulty that arises in the affairs of Europe or Asia or Africa. There isn't a school boy nor girl in America but who knows that the power to declare war is lodged with Congress. The President hasn't any more right to send our boys overseas to fight than you have and not so much. No League can send our soldier boys overseas—no President can do it—only Congress can do it. And Congress is more safely buttressed now in the ways and ideals of Peace than it ever has been before because Congress has in part a new boss now. The mother thought of America will be consulted in the future. I give you my assurance that with America in the League of Nations here will be absolutely no danger of your boys being ordered overseas without your consent.

"The candidate of the Senatorial oligarchy by this statement that he has no constructive plan to offer as a substitute for the League of Nations, which he has stated he would "scrap," enters a plea of guilty on behalf of himself and his associates for the most stupendous conspiracy the world has ever seen. This statement is a confession of the charge I have made that this group has deliberately held up the peace of the world and outraged a suffering civilization for selfish, partisan purposes, and has wilfully obstructed the reconstruction processes in the United States that they might win a presidential election for themselves in a resentment that might be aroused at the administration in power.

"Let me call your attention to the fact they at the successful conclusion of the war the present administration, mindful of the requirements for readjustment put forward a definite and sufficient program for reconstruction, which was rejected by the Congress under the whip of partisan leadership for the deliberate purpose of continuing a condition of chaos and inducing the people to cry for a change. They ache for success because they seek control of the agencies which now render service to the people. They would destroy the Federal Reserve System, which bankers and business men agree has been one of the most progressive pieces of legislation ever enacted in a century. Under the Federal Reserve System panics are impossible. The financial control is shifted from Wall street to the normal channels of the business world. The reactionary Senatorial group wants to give control back to Wall street—I am against that and they are against me. They would destroy the industrial peace of the country and wreck its prosperity to win this election, but fortunately their despicable plot has been discovered in time.

"In the same spirit that makes me a progressive in international affairs, I am a progressive in domestic affairs. I believe that government must be held always responsive to the needs of the people. The progressive believes that you should change your governmental systems as conditions on the farm, as conditions in the factory, as conditions in the shops change and you cannot hold the confidence of the great mass in government unless government continues to be useful to the great mass of the people.

"These are the facts with reference to present world wide conditions. I ask you only to consult your consciences. We must vote this fall as Americans. Our intelligence must sway us. We must consult our consciences because after all it is the voice of God and if you do that then the mandate will have been so impressive that politicians in the future will know better than to stand in the way of normal development of civilization and free government of and for and by the people will have been vindicated. War will have been rendered practically impossible and the mothers of America can contemplate the future with the security they have known nothing about for a long time. Civilization will have been saved and the genius of our fathers who placed their questions in the last analysis in the hands of our great electorate will have been vindicated.

"I leave you with the message that I am for peace rather than war; that I am for progress rather than reaction; that I am for prosperity based upon readjustment that recognizes just one principle—the principle of the square deal, the principle of the Golden Rule.

Iron Will

That great strength of mind and body, that exhaustless energy, that IRON WILL that make a famous merchant out of a humble clerk, a millionaire out of a penniless immigrant, a Lincoln out of a wood-chopper—often come from red blood—rich in iron.

"Do you lack power of decision, energy, and stamina? Are your ambitions greater than your strength? You need not be discouraged, says Dr. James Sullivan, formerly of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and Westchester County Hospital. "By feeding the blood pure organic iron—Nuxated Iron—many a weak, run-down, discouraged man has changed to a red-blooded American, full of force and energy that win success." Nuxated Iron is used and endorsed by former United States Senators and Members of Congress, and by such well-known men as Frederick, ex-Premier of Poland. It often increases strength and endurance in two weeks' time.
